

Write Like A Pirate

Once you've mastered talking like a pirate, try one of these story starters* to write like a pirate, too!

Grace O'Malley was the Irish Sea Queen of the 16th century. Earning her sea legs as a kid on voyages with her father, O'Malley went on to lead a crew of 200 sailors...

When Captain Don Sandovate voyaged from Spain to the New World in search of treasure, he found gold in abundance. But among his crew, there were many sailors who did not wish to share the new-found wealth with the monarchs of Spain...

The Palatine gleamed in the sunlight as she set out with a full crew, a long list of passengers, and a hull full of merchandise for the American Colonies the winter of 1750. Certainly, there was no indication that morning of the destiny fate had in store for her...

Black Bartelmy was an evil, surly buccaneer who murdered his wife and children and went to sea with a band of pirates as nasty as he. He roamed the Atlantic coast, murdering and pillaging and laying waste to the countryside as he passed...

Legendary and ruthless sea-raider "Black Bart" may win the award for the most prolific pirate, with more than 400 ships reportedly falling to his sword in the early 18th century. But Bart was much more civilized than history would have you believe...

*These story starters are actually the beginnings of TRUE pirate tales! After you've written your stories, look up the real history and compare them.
